

New Text Document.txt

correspondingly to each other, an instruction change/insertion means 4 which detects an instruction as the change/insertion object from the source program and substitutes the instruction as the change object with an instruction after the change or inserts the instruction as the insertion object to an insertion position and changes the position of a label to the head of the inserted instruction in the case of insertion of the instruction before another instruction to which this label is given, and an assembling means 5 which assembles the source program subjected to instruction change/insertion to convert it to the object program while substituting the labels with addresses.

COPYRIGHT: (C)1996, JPO

Best Available Copy